Miniatures – As Holiday Decoration!

Every year, just before the holidays, brands try to offer new sets of bottles and accompanying body care products beautifully designed and decorated. However, I am enchanted over and over again by gift sets of miniatures which can be a wonderful gift for our loved ones. Regardless of the small amount of perfume that is inside a tiny bottle, it is a great experience to possess and test differen...

Cheese and smelly body parts

It's no surprise that sometimes cheese odours and body odours are similar. But when we started working together we were surprised by how not only do cheese and smelly body parts like feet share similar odour molecules but also have similar microbial populations. — Just in case you were wondering what scent artist Sissel Tolaas [...]

Von

Eusersdorff New York is one of those perfume houses that flies under the radar of perfume connoisseurs. They made little buzz about themselves, they do not like the noisy flirting with customers and did not come up with a beautiful legend. Creative director and owner Camille Henfling has launched Von Eusersdorff New York with no scandals—neither in perfumes nor names—and tried to find th...

L'Occitane Passionate Jasmine, Subtle Violet and Fleur d'Or & Acacia shea hand creams – scented body product review

I am a little surprised to see we've never reviewed one of L'Occitane's shea butter hand creams, but hey, most of you are probably familiar with the product — according to L'Occitane, they sell one every three seconds. It's a thick hand cream in a metal tube, sometimes without. The formula is 20% shea butter,<sup>1</sup> but it sinks in nicely and doesn't leave hands greasy. And it works, or at least, I find that it works quickly when my hands are parched in the winter.<sup>2</sup> The metal tubes seem to hold up pretty well, which is more than I can say for some metal tube hand creams, which split along the sides before you've finished the product.<sup>3</sup>

Happily for perfumistas, L'Occitane regularly introduces new limited edition fragrances — actually, I'm not sure I've ever tried the "regular", non-scented version, but I often have one of the 30 ml travel tubes, in one scent or another, tucked in my purse...
